When the enzyme is blocked, a substance called cyclic guanosine monophosphate (cGMP) cannot be broken down and remains in the vessels where it causes the relaxation and widening of the blood vessels.